f. On Sunday, 15 November, the Headquarters emergency generator system was successfully tested. During the test, a power outage was initiated by disconnecting Headquarters from the Virginia Electric and Power Company. All critical electrical loads were then serviced by four Uninterruptible Power Systems until our five emergency generators automatically started, synchronized, and assumed the electrical load. All systems functioned properly. ☐

i. On the 19th of November, the DDA and Jim McDonald, the Director of Logistics, attended a briefing at GSA on the delivery of services to customer agencies. GSA has reorganized, brought in new executives from both the private and public sectors, and has introduced several new initiatives to improve services and cut expenses. These include contracting for certain services formerly supplied by GSA staff personnel, looking to industry for new management approaches, and an experiment that delegates authority to a small number of agencies to manage their building operations and maintenance. From these briefings, it would appear that GSA services will be reduced in the future, while those provided will be at a higher cost to us. ☐
